Features of self-realization of a person in sport activity

A. A. Sergeeva
Master of Psychology Department at the International University of Nature, Society and Human «Dubna» altezza@hotmail.ru

The purpose of the present paper is to define the role of sport activity in personal development and self-realization and to define the nature of the relations between self-realization and motivation, and a system of values of the sportsmen. According to the tasks of research, psychological theories of self-realization, approaches to studying sport motivation are considered and the sport is defined as a kind of activity in the work. The work consists of the research conducted among the sportsmen of different skill level (N = 28). Conclusions concerning relations between self-realization and motivation, and a system of values of the sportsmen are drawn.

Key words: self-realization, sport motivation, requirement for achievement, sports qualification, and a system of values of the sportsmen.